

CONTRIBUTORS

Łukasz Byrski is currently an M.A. student in the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków. His research interests include: writing systems – especially non-alphabetical, epigraphy, ancient linguistics, and palaeography.

Robert Czyżykowski is an assistant professor at the Institute for the Study of Religions, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. He specializes in the religions of India: Vaishnavism, Tantra, and Yoga, and the anthropology of religion.

Cezary Galewicz is currently the head of the Department of Indology at the Institute of Oriental Studies, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. His recent research has focused mainly on the history of knowledge systems and scholarly communities, anthropology of knowledge and intellectual practices, history of books and reading, and ancient scriptural traditions of South Asia: their performative aspects and relationship with rituals and centres of power, their transformations and persistence in the changing social and historical context of pre-modern and contemporary South Asia. Most recently, history of urbanity and print culture in early modern South Asia have been added to his list of interests. Current research projects combine textual close reading with historical perspective, field studies, and ethnographic cum anthropological film documentation.

Bożena Gierk is an associate professor at the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków, Poland. Her research focuses on Celtic culture, comparative cultures (approached through anthropology), and on non-verbal communication. Her most important publications are: Celtowie [Celts], 1998; Tradycja celtycka w życiu religijnym współczesnego społeczeństwa irlandzkiego [Celtic Tradition in Religious Life of Contemporary Irish Society], 2002; Religie Celtów [Religions of the Celts], 2013.

Joanna Jurewicz is a professor at the Oriental Studies Department of Warsaw University. In her research, she uses the interdisciplinary methodology of philology and cognitive linguistics to analyse ancient Indian texts (Vedic texts and philosophical parts of the Mahābhārata, particularly the Bhagavadgīta and the Mokṣadharmaparvan) and the religious and cultural aspects of the Hindu tradition. Latest publications (in English): Fire and Cognition in the Ṛgveda (Warszawa: Dom Wydawniczy Elipsa 2010), Categorization in the Brāhmaṇas (“Cracow Indological Studies. Text Division & Classification of Knowledge in Literary and Epistemic Cultures of Pre-Modern India” 2011, Vol. 13, p. 63–82), What Ancient Indian Cosmogonies Tell Us about Language? (Oriental Studies – Past and Present. Proceeding of the International Conference of Oriental Studies, eds. A. Bareja-Starzyńska, M. Mejor, “Rocznik Orientalistyczny” 2010, Vol. 65, No. 1, p. 75–89.)

Piotr Kalicki is a Ph.D. student of archaeology at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków. His main research interests are: the archaeology of the New World (with special emphasis on Andean archaeology), archaeology of complex societies, environmental archaeology, and the theory of archaeology and anthropology. Currently he is conducting interdisciplinary research in Lomas de Lachay, on the central coast of Peru, investigating human adaptation strategies to environmental changes, as a leader of the project “Fog in the Desert – Human Response to Climate Change in the Late Pre-Colombian Andes. A Case Study from the Lachay-Iguanil Region” financed by the National Science Centre of Poland (Narodowe Centrum Nauki).

Mateusz Kłagisz works for the Department of Iranian Studies at the Institute of Oriental Studies, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. His interests cover Zoroastrianism, Middle Persian literature and language, translatology, and philosophy.

Wojciech Kosior is an assistant professor at the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków, Poland. A psychologist and scholar of religions, his primary field of interest is the Hebrew Bible and its rabbinic interpretation. He is currently working on the issue of the apotropaic notion of basic Jewish customs.

Artur Przybyśławski is an associate professor at the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. He has published the following books: Coincidentia Oppositorum (2004), Buddhist Philosophy of Emptiness (2009), and Emptiness is Joy (2010).

Małgorzata Ruchel is an adjunct professor at the Institute of Philosophy, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. Her fields of research include classical Indian philosophies and pre-classical Vedic culture, with a special interest in ideas concerning speech and language.

Julia Alexandrovna Shabanova is the head of the Department of Philosophy at the State HEI “National Mining University” in Dnipropetrovsk, Ukraine. Her field of interest includes history of philosophy (medieval mysticism and Russian religious philosophy), theosophy, and contemporary problems of spirituality in science and education. Additionally, she is the director of the Centre for Aesthetics Development, the International Centre of Engineering Pedagogy (IGIP), and of the Laboratory of Humane Pedagogy – all entities within the State HEI “National Mining University.”

Anatolii Alexandrovich Osipov is a professor at the Political Science, Sociology and Humanities Department, at Alfred Nobel University (Dnipropetrovsk, Ukraine). The scope of his scientific research includes philosophical and anthropological methodology for the study of spirituality and its practice, phenomenology, philosophical hermeneutics, magic, shamanism, astrology, and alchemy. He is also a full-fledged member of the National Academy of Science Humanitarian Education Center.

Tomasz Sikora is an assistant professor at the Institute for the Study of Religions, Jagiellonian University in Kraków. His research interests include semiotics, phenomenology, comparative history of religion, and Jewish studies.

Agnieszka Staszczuk is an assistant professor at the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków. Her research concerns the early art of the Indian subcontinent, especially its iconography and the origin of religious representations.

Jacek Trzebuniak is a Ph.D. student at the Centre for Comparative Studies of Civilisations at the Jagiellonian University in Kraków, and is involved in the Society-Environment-Technology programme. He specializes in the history and religions of Tibet, with a particular interest in Bon – the native Tibetan tradition.

Hanna Urbńska is an associate professor at the Department of Indian Philology (Institute of Classical, Mediterranean and Oriental Studies) at the University of Wrocław. Her main area of interest and research is modern Malayalam poetry. At present she is preparing her postdoctoral thesis on P. Ravikumār’s Nacikēṭassu. She has published some articles devoted to Malayalam, Khmer, Chinese, and Sanskrit literature, for example “Some Ancient Chinese Stories about White Rainbows.”

Polish Journal of the Arts and Culture

The „Polish Journal of the Arts and Culture” was started in 2012 as a series of “Estetyka i Krytyka”.

The „Polish Journal of the Arts and Culture” is a quarterly peer-reviewed academic publication which welcomes submissions from all interested parties wishing to exchange more profound thoughts and ideas on different aspects of culture – its nature, the processes that have shaped it in the past and continue to influence it contemporarily, and its forms that have varied depending on the period or civilisation in which they developed. The interdisciplinary profile of the Journal allows combining different research perspectives including philosophical, sociological, anthropological as well as literature, religion, or broadly understood cultural studies, with the recent developments in the latter being its special focus.

Publications in the Journal include:

- theoretical papers,
- methodological texts,
- reports on empirical studies,
- other reports and communications,
- translations of papers focused on different aspects of cultural studies,
- reviews of other texts of relevance for cultural studies.

We invite submissions in Polish or English.

Only original papers that have not been published elsewhere will be admitted for publication.

For editorial Policy and review procedure refer to: www.pjac.uj.edu.pl

Contact:

e-mail: pjac@uj.edu.pl

Address:

Instytut Filozofii UJ
ul. Grodzka 52, 31-044
31-044 Kraków

In the previous volume 8 (5/2013):

Karol Chrobak, *Antropologia sceny. Analiza porównawcza antropologii
Józefa Tischnera oraz Helmutha Plessnera*

Teresa Miążek, Bhāva jako motyw. Wprowadzenie do analizy opowiadań Agjeja w świetle teorii rasa

Joanna Miklaszewska, *Contemporary Music Documenting the Nazi Terror:
Steve Reich's Different Trains*

Mariya Ruseva, The Holocaust Requiem – Commemoration or Redemption

In the next volume 10 (2/2014):

Michał Zawadzki, *Hermann Hesse, ambiwalencja i tragizm
życia przebudzonego*

Jacek Trzebuniak, Tulku system in the West

Karolina Kotkowska, *ABRAXAS i zachodnie tradycje ezoteryczne.
Wybrane aspekty*

Artur Przybysławski, Lung, czyli siła słowa mówionego w tradycji buddyzmu tybetańskiego

